

The Wizard of Oz

Frank Baum published "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz" in 1899. It was an allegory for the populist movement at the end of the 19th century in the USA. The populist movement was comprised of mostly factory workers and farmers. The populists believed that if the government minted silver coins and circulated them throughout the economy the prices of their products would increase. Dorothy (the people), the scarecrow (farmers), the tin man (factory workers), and the lion (weak politicians) represented the populist movement. From the perspective of the bankers, industrialists, and their politicians - the Wizard of Oz - farmers were brainless, factory workers were demoralized, and politicians were weak. The Wizard of Oz owned and controlled most of the money (i.e. gold coins), which was symbolized by the yellow brick road. The Wizard of Oz had a large interest in the mass media, which he used to scare, deceive, and manipulate the people.

Often, when nations go to war, their governments enact laws that allow them to create money by decree. The Wizard of Oz had control over the Emerald City. The Emerald City represented a dystopian society controlled by fiat currency, much like we have today.

In the movie, Dorothy's slippers were ruby red, but in the book, they were made of silver. According to the populists, Dorothy's silver shoes (i.e. silver coins) represented the cure to the economic recession. Once the shroud of the Wizard of Oz was lifted, his power to manipulate the masses was lost.

The Berlin Corona Committee and others have been using the term "Mr. Global". Like the Wizard of Oz, Mr. Global is a euphemism for an international superclass comprised of bankers, investment groups, media outlets, politicians, academics, corporations, NGOs, and foundations (www.stopworldcontrol.com).

Mr. Global

Mr. Global's origins can be traced back to Lord Cecil Rhodes. At this time, western democratic nations operated on a gold-coin standard and market interest rates – i.e. free markets. Mr. Global instated income taxes and central banks in Canada and the USA at the onset of World War I. Shortly after, Mr. Global began adopting the economic theories of John Maynard Keynes, thereby allowing central banks to set interest rates. The theories of Keynes led to the roaring twenties, which resulted in the Great Depression that lasted until after World War II. In the 1930's Mr. Global coerced Americans to exchange their gold coins for government-gold-backed notes, making it illegal to own physical gold coins. During the Great Wars the world operated with fiat money. After World War II, Mr. Global established the Bretton Woods Agreement for international trade, which was a quasi-paper-gold standard. On August 15th, 1971, Mr. Global reneged on the Bretton Woods Agreement. Ever since then, the world over has operated with fiat currencies.

Fiat currencies cannot be defined in any way except by referencing them to the price of gold when the Bretton Woods Agreement broke down on August 15th, 1971. Those currently operating the financial system have all been trained in universities that teach Keynesian economic theory. This means that, on the one hand, government-funded university economics professors teach that mercantilism (i.e. cartel or monopoly control over industries) is bad for an economy; while, on the other hand, they teach that either private or government monopoly control over interest rates and money creation is for the greater good. Government-funded education does not teach about the market distortions and moral hazards caused by central banking and fiat money. They do not teach about inflation.

Inflation is a hidden tax. It is caused by central banks increasing the amount of money in the economy. As more money is made available for the same amount of goods and services, the prices of the goods and services must increase. Inflation hurts low-income people the hardest. More of their income is spent on essentials, so less can be put towards savings and capital investments.

For the past fifty years, Mr. Global has been building a global top-down dictatorship. Mr. Global seeks to elevate (global) state power and (global) corporate power above the church, the nation state, the family, and the individual. Mr. Global aims to overthrow western democratic rule, which is a bottoms-up appeals court system founded on Natural Law.

Mr. Global owns the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, and the Bank of International Settlements. These international banks coordinate with the central banks of the world (e.g. Bank of Canada) to set interest rates. A country's central bank loans fiat currency at below-market interest to the government and commercial banks within its jurisdiction (e.g. ScotiaBank). Commercial and charter banks give favourable loans to corporations and NGOs that agree with and are willing to implement Mr. Global's agenda. Mr. Global's corporations hire expensive lobbyists and lawyers to bribe elected representatives into enacting legislation that is favourable to Mr. Global's agenda. Mr. Global's influence can be found in all levels of government, in legacy media, Big Tech, Big Ag, Big Pharma, Big Oil, among others.

Mr. Global's Big Problems

While Mr. Global has influence over most of the nations' policies and programs, government programs can only be paid for with public funds. Public funds are obtained by either taxing or borrowing. Governments cannot get elected on platforms that include higher taxes. Furthermore, because government debts are at historical highs, central banks have set interest rates artificially low. Because interest rates have been set so low, there is no incentive to loan governments money. In other words, public funds can no longer increase by taxing or borrowing. For governments to pay for their existing programs and unfunded liabilities, they only have one tool left: inflation. High inflation (10-20% per year) will erode the people's faith in government programs and fiat currencies in general. The entire world is witnessing the unfolding of "The Great Default", but Mr. Global is trying to call it "The Great Reset".

Fear is the tool of Mr. Global. Out of fear and ignorance, people consent to Mr. Global's schemes. His schemes include anthropogenic global climate change, global pandemics, global racism, etc. This fear is spread via Mr. Global's media. Mr. Global has the problem of the waning public ignorance that stems from the decreasing cost of information. Mr. Global's media's influence is decreasing because intelligent, independent websites provide truthful information at very low cost. Every day, more people are waking up to who Mr. Global is and how he operates.

Austrian Free-Market Economics

The best website on economics is www.mises.org. Ron Paul and Lew Rockwell conceived the Mises Institute in 1982. The Mises Institute promotes Austrian free market economic teachings. Many consider Ludwig von Mises to be the greatest economist of all time. His 1920 essay: "Economic Calculation in the Socialist Commonwealth", clearly explains why central economic planning (i.e. socialism) fails every time it is tried. A breakdown in the economy occurs when the state, rather than the people, owns the means of production. Risk-taking, property-owning entrepreneurs, not tenured government bureaucrats, are needed for economic calculation. On December 25th, 1991, the Soviet Union collapsed for exactly the reasons Mises had explained.

How the Party Will Take on Mr. Global

The Party leader, Maxime Bernier, along with many Party members, support Austrian free-market economic policies. Eventually, enough Canadians will demand an end to inflationary monetary policies and vote in a government that knows how to achieve this end. The PPC's official monetary policy is to curb the inflation rate to zero percent. This is possible by prohibiting the Bank of Canada from creating more fiat currency to fund government programs. The PPC is the only federal party that aims to end inflation in Canada for good.

Today, most Canadians believe in central economic planning, and, because of public education, many have grown up ignorant about international finance and world monetary history. However, socialist policies, like the unprecedented increase in government spending coupled with negative interest rates, will surely bring forth high inflation and other societal miseries in the near-term. The Party will continue its national educational campaign on what it means to live in and how to achieve a free society. We know that a free society with free markets is achieved when the people insist on taking responsibility for themselves. In a free society, the government's primary role is to protect individual freedom by applying Natural Law without prejudice.
